PURDUE UNIVERSITY
BIOPHYSICAL LABORATORY
LAFAYETTE, INDIANA

March 13, 1956

Dear Josh + Esther,

thanks for the tip on your "p 20". It sounds indeed like a close relative of T6rII. As such, it would probably not add much to the T4rII story, so please do not hunt for it*. But it would be nice if you could conjure up some different cases.

Alan received a batch of bugs from Lennox and therefore withdrew his request.

Best regards.
Sincerely
Seymour.

* unless you think it was not r type on B.