Dear Henry –

I will shortly send you some of the later articles in this TV series that are on their way through the press. I think they will narrow the zone of our disagreement, if indeed there is any at all.

Certainly I did not minimize the effect of TV on children. I questioned whether it needed any further research, and indeed whether this was really possible if scientific rigor were the aim. But I suppose some more window-dressing will be needed to spark effective action. (I was afraid that the NIMH committee might get hung up on whether adverse effects could be rigorously proven – cf. cigarettes)
