Dear Dr Dodge:

Dr Tatum and I are interested in doing some work on the nutrition of Neurospora with the eventual aim of determining whether the requirements might be dependent on genetic constitution. I have written to Dr Lindegren to see if he can supply us with some stocks. If preliminary experiments prove to be encouraging we will be interested in trying out the available species, and also various collections of "wild-type" if we can get them. Do you have a collection of material or could you give us information as to who, aside from Lindegren, might have? We'd rather wait until we've made some trials before actually obtaining material, but we would be glad to have at hand information as to what is available.

Thanking you for any information you can give us, I am

Sincerely yours,

G W Beadle
