Comparative Toxicology

Dear John

I'm addressing the American College of Toxicology next month (Dec. 5). I plan to stress comparative toxicology as the scientific discipline we need to develop (a) to import the excitement and depth of approach of modern molecular genetics ~~and~~ for mechanistic understanding and

(b) as the scientific substratum of risk assessment, viz. rational extrapolation from animal to human.

Do you have access to any updated bibliographies, esp. recent reviews, of species variation in pharm/toxicological response?

Yours,

Jim
