My dear Francis

Thank you for your shoal of daily letters! I meant to ring you tonight & then realised you had no phone since moving. I will be up on Sat afternoon. Geoffrey is staying behind as he has some things which have to be finished before we go to Brussels. It is very nice of you to offer to put him up.

L.H is interested in rot. pol & feels Boyes might not be much use so maybe that is the best line.

I should have replied before but was feeling lousy & thought I might be too depressing & should keep away from humanity. Rosie's colloquium made me a bit sicker. God knows what will become of all this business. They talked for $1\frac{3}{4}$ hours non stop & she effectively refused to answer questions. They had a unit cell big enough to sit in (but nothing in it).

(I feel allright today)

It would be nice to see the Markhams. He is certainly good company & I remember her as a nice person.

Its very nice of you to get Paulings paper & I will tell you all I can remember & scribble down from Rosie.

I would like to speak to Broad & get a blue print of a r.a. from him

I will telephone before this gets to you. Tried telephoning tonight & they got all diff numbers & ended up with poor Ingram who very nicely offered to bring you a message. Sorry I have been so deplorably slow in replying. I hope this hasn't been very much of a nuisance. Special regards to Odile. M.
