Van Slyke photo.

Sorry we couldn't help you more. I'm not hopeful; but I'll keep an ear open. If it were important enough for you, you could browse through our archives yourself for a few days; but I doubt if our staff could do that for you.

I thought you'd enjoy the photo.

Thank you for your note and the papers

Joshua

From left to right: Walter A. Jacobs, Donald D. Van Slyke, and Gustave M. Meyer, members of the scientific staff of The Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, at work in the laboratory of P.A.T. Levene on December 1, 1908. The Institute later became The Rockefeller University. Its records (2,500 cu. ft.) and the papers of members of the faculty and administration constitute a major resource for the history of science, education, and health which scholars have just begun to utilize.
