Dear Mr. Meuche:

To yours of November 20th, I applaud your efforts at public education on the impact of modern science, but my own personal preference for means of communication has leaned towards a column in the press. I do write weekly for the Washington Post and this is syndicated to a small number of other newspapers.

I feel this is about as much effort as I can give to these issues and on that basis, I would ask to be relieved of what you ask me for in your letter. If you wish, however, I believe it would not be difficult to arrange permission for you to read these columns if you so wish.

Sincerely,

Joshua Lederberg
Professor of Genetics
