Dear Lammann

January 28, 1979

To have the Lightman study twin so soon! You have our profound sympathies.

Your brother's life was nothing if not full, but Harry just began to serve him personally, I regret the lost opportunity to share in the adventure still not fully led. We don't know what the measure of a man's life should be; but when there is still so much more to be done, our own efforts in medical research still have an undoubted meaning; what an absurdity that life should hang on a few minutes' intuition of a premony.

I earnestly believe that in a very few years, we will be far less the puppets of such absurdities.

Small consolation now, but a constant reminder of our endurance.
