Dear Dr. Lederberg:

Thank you for spending so much time talking with me on Tuesday, October 10. I greatly appreciate your thoughtful advice about evaluating research, especially in the WHO context. Your comments about how to encourage research through workshops and seminars and about supporting research in the "middle-tier" countries are ones (among others) I shall keep in mind in launching the social and economic research component. It would be a pleasure and privilege to return to Rockefeller University to talk further about the Special Programme with you, Mr. Nichols and others you think appropriate.

Under separate cover, I am sending you the new RFF publication on drinking water which includes a brief mention of the activated carbon filter problem. I have enclosed here some of the papers obtained from Mr. Frank Bell, Office of Water Supply, Environmental Protection Agency, Washington. I hope they are useful.

Again, thank you for a gracious and stimulating conversation.

With best wishes.

Sincerely,

Patricia L. Rosenfield, Ph.D.
