Dear Mr. Bodi

My respect and affection for you are such that I would hope you would never print such an inflammatory letter as the one I wrote you. I would not put my name and address on that contribution out of concern for my family's safety: why should I plant a dangerous association in a psychotic mind. And the same considerations ought to influence your judgment in printing such material.

I understand your point about the public interest in knowing what the police are up against. My complaint was only that you went into such factual detail in spreading the recipes for violence. You are right that the dedicated guerillas have their own information. But your story does spread it far wider than that; perhaps you do not share my pessimism about how many of your potential readers are psychotic juveniles.

BODI

I hope I am wrong in predicting that we are going to experience a wave of imitations of that article in juvenile 'prelks' with spiked cherry bombs. And please do not print my letter-- really I don't want them tossed your way.

Would you be interested in pursuing this question over a luncheon discussion? I think I could recruit some of my psychiatrist friends (who will have more expert knowledge than I pretend to) to join us.

Sincerely,
