This is obviously a huge subject. I must ask you to make some effort to understand my position before trying to comment on it; and I am afraid this may entail some work, at least before I get my own book out. I do enclose a pile of material selected for its relevance.

Some bibliographic notes are attached. For a reciprocal favor, would you send me any titles you have run into on Prometheus as a mythical basis of our theme? For example, Shelley (Prometheus, the new Prometheus).

I tend to have a somewhat paradoxical, non-action program of an action program. My BS article explores some of the basic difficulties in establishing normative goals for eugenic and algenic programs. However, I will not comment on this. Please do not confuse my ventillation of a subject in what I try to keep a detached mood, with affirmative advocacy of my position. I think there is a legitimate parallel to ask what controls should there be on psychiatric investigation and practice. Do recall what Freud had to say about psychoanalysis.

I think there is a legitimate parallel to ask what controls should there be on psychiatric investigation and practice. I will have some more explicit material on "Controls for Genetic Experimentation," in a couple of days (weeks) and will send it on.
